To feel an explosion's fury or the cool taste of vanilla ice cream on one's tongue, to see a mist-sprinkled rainbow dazzle in the tranquil morning sun, these are things one must experience to truly know. I have lived my life in a maze of glory and despair, clawing for contentment, reveling in ecstasy, and battling for purpose. My transient words are echoes of eternity reverberating between a wandering soul and a darkened world of hope. They are reflections of a love that is continually calling, pursuing, embracing, consuming, and transforming me. Here I have opened my heart and spilt its passion like ink upon the page, longing to have another's eyes behold the grace given so freely to us all. This book thirsts for the world to gaze at its misery and its beauty through my eyes, and through the eyes of He who made me see.
